Ariel (Pink) Rosenberg's Thrash n' Burn (1998)

No longer available 2-CDR issue of early Ariel Pink stuff. Song sketches, noise experiments, and shades of the greatness to come. Ariel Pink's music is spectacular, but even I think this stuff is pretty much for completists only. That said, I'm sure that there are other Ariel Pink completists out there, and this post is for you guys and gals.

We Are Back !!!

First of all my apologies for no replies to your mails for invitation to our "private" blog(s)... But I couldn't reply to all this mails and explain why we "close" this page(s) for a couple of days.

"A private blog it's not a solution, so Don't send me requests for invitations. You will not have access for some days...that's all."

We had to back-up all the info and covers for all 4 Lost-In-Tyme pages. That give us the possibility to open a New Lost-In-Tyme if blogger take "actions" against my account.

"Please note that repeated violations to our Terms of Service may result in further remedial action taken against your Blogger account."

'Leap' ain't no masterpiece, but it sure has some wonderful moments to offer. As for White Glove Test, to tell you the truth I don't know where they intend to go, as they didn't manage to get an totally personal sound, but they surely had the potentials to do it, if they'd continued.

Their connections with Philip Drucker continue until nowadays: Jeff Brenneman and Tony Davis (as well as Dirk Doucette - a WGT member, not on Leap) are now members of 17 Pygmies (which, by the way, have a new -very 60's- record out, as "The 17th Pygmy" by the title of "Ballade Of Tristram's Last Harping")

White Glove Test- Jeff Brenneman, Ken Wait, Patrick Monnin, Tony Davis
Leap (LP, Fundamental SAVE 81, 1989) Leap/Between the Oars/The Worshipping Boys/Poignant/Lisa//Bycycle/Pandoras Song/All and Everything/Moment/Every Day
